

Job Title: Program Intern, Ceramics

Inner-City Arts is an oasis of learning, creativity, and achievement in the heart of Skid Row, and a vital partner in the work of creating a safer, healthier Los Angeles. Since its inception, Inner-City Arts has provided hands-on art instruction to over 210,000 public school students and 10,000 educators in the Los Angeles area. Every year, more than 5,000 elementary and middle school students — from among the most underserved urban neighborhoods in Los Angeles — receive high-quality creative experiences during the school day on the Inner-City Arts campus. More than 1,000 middle and high school students engage in workshops at Inner-City Arts after school, on weekends, and during the summer. In all this time, Inner-City Arts has partnered with LAUSD to provide transformational learning that meets the needs of our students.

Job Description:

As Program Intern, you will work alongside Teaching Artist Rebecca Tager to support studio needs, including but not limited to assisting in the studio during class time, prepping materials, administrative duties, and overall program support. This role will contribute to the program's growth while working with teaching artists to ensure a creative, engaging, fun, and original experience for students. Experience working with students in some capacity is desired and interest and/or experience working in a ceramics studio is a plus.
